

Editing Tatishchev's Kamas vocabulary

Gerson Klumpp, University of Tartu

1. Vasilij Nikitič Tatiščev's questionnaire

- historian
- 1720–1722, and 1734–1737 director of the Ekaterinburg based Imperial Mining Agency of the Urals
- puts down a Bashkir rebellion 1737–1739
- Governor of Astrakhan 1741–1745

Portrait by N. Brize

- part of the language comparison movement (reconstructing people's histories after the Babylonian language confusion; cf. G. W. Leibniz: "Certum est nihil majorem ad antiquas populorum origines indagandas lucem praebere, quam collationem linguarum. / Certainly is there nothing more eligible to enlighten the history of ancient peoples than the comparison of languages", 1768: Leibnitii Opera omnia, vol. 6, part 2, p. 228), in 1734 T. had developed a lexical questionnaire, which, however, was not accepted by the Russian Academy of Sciences
- T. sent it on his own initiative and costs to various posts in Kazan and Siberia,
- answers were received from 1737 on.

2. The Kamas vocabulary

- “Izvestie o Krasnojarske i o živuščix tam narodax na voprosy g. Tatiščeva 1735 i 1738 godov” (without exact date) includes vocabularies of Kamas (pp. 43–55), Kacha Tatar (31–42), Arinic (55–66ob), and “Kanic” (Kott) (78ob–90)
- richest Kamas source from the 18th century: 404 answers to 497 Russian headwords, ca. 350 Kamas stems with 479 tokens;
- translated by Kamas Tatar Surastaj Sudačakov, interpreter Cossack Ivan Kovrigin, and local civil servant Egor Kačaev; Sudačakov had to attest on oath that the vocabulary does not include any expressions unknown in the Kamasinskaja Zemlica:

Сей Камасинской землии перевозен с русского на камасинской языке чрез толмачество коиного казака Ивана Ковригина и чрез камасинского татарина Сурастая Судачикова Что он по своей вере и по шерти против русского звания сказывал верно а что выше нареченных словах иных нет чает сказать что во оной Камасинской землице не имеется о сем и знямя свое приложил
Знаме ¹ Сурастая Судачакова вместо его беломесной посадской Егор Качаев вместо ж толмача Ивана Ковригина руку приложил

"Of this Kamas land translated from Russian into Kamas through Cavalry Cossack Ivan Kovrigin as interpreter and through the Kamas Tatar Surastaj Sudačikov; that he according to his faith and on oath corresponding to the Russian title answered correctly, and that among the above listed words some are absent he wants to say that in this Kamas land there is no knowledge about that; and he attached his signature.

The sign fl of Surastaj Sudačakov; instead of him free town-dweller Egor Kačaev and also instead the interpreter Ivan Kovrigin attached his hand [signature]" (reading and literal translation by Eugene Helimski).

- first reading by Hartmut Katz (before 1996); support by Eugen Helimski who had organized copies of the original at the State Archive of Old Documents in Moscow (RGADA f. 199 o. 2 nr. 516 d. 2, pp. 43–55)
- 18th century Russian cancellary script, difficult to read, positional and free variation of characters, no distinction of ь and ъ!

3. Some observations

- 1) elsewhere not attested: izin (? ezin, čzin) ‘joint < PS *esəjn ‘Gelenk, Glied’ in 50.303 izin müjü ‘joint finger’ <изенмию> ‘пясть’ (‘metacarpus’);
- 2) restricted Christian terminology, e.g. 43.1 богъ ‘God’: num <нумъ>, 43.3 святы ‘saint’: num=že <нумже> ‘also num’, 43.6 ангел ‘angel’: num=že <нумже>, 43.8 царство небесное ‘Kingdom of Heaven’: num=že <нумже>;

Святы	ијак	Врчите
тибогицан		сиги	ијак
онда	Бг#Б.иура	ијакибо ико	ијак

- 3) strong Turkic lexical impact, e.g. replacement of autochthonous designations of animals, e.g. 44ob.85 kara kuš ‘eagle (lit. black bird, Tu.)’ (<каракушъ> ‘орель’) instead of ni?;
- 4) exocentric determinative compound 49.251 o?b jada ‘neighbour (lit. one-village)’ (<обеда> ‘сосед’);

- 5) isogloss between 18th century Kamas sources and Koibal: süme ‘wild reindeer’ (Tat. 44ob.66 <сумя>, Mue. <sumjä> ~ <smjä>, Koib. Sp. <суме>) vs. kaguldan ~ kaldan ~ kagdan (Castrén <<kagdán>, Donner [kåydøn], Eagle [kål'dån], Fat [kāyuldan]).
- Implications for the Kamas dialect taxonomy:

Kamas
Koibal Pallas 18 th c. Spasskij 19 th c.	Steppe Müller, Tatiš-čev 18 th c.	Forest
		Forest I
		Fat Donner, Künnap 20 th c.	Eagle Castrén 19 th , Donner 20 th c.

- 6) finite or participle formations for abstract nouns, e.g. 49ob.278 смерть ‘death’: kuza kii-me <куза куме> ‘person die-PTCP’; 49ob.275 болезнь ‘disease’: kuza iżən-bi <куза исынби> ‘person become.ill-PST.PTCP’;
- 7) numerals (1–3), adjectives and participles often come with the word kuza ‘person’: 51.344 два ‘2’: šide kuza <шитекуза> ‘two persons’; 51.345 три ‘3’: nagur kuza <нагуркуза> ‘three persons’; 52ob.413 добръ ‘good’: jakši kuza <яакши куса> ‘good person’; 52ob.408 тих ‘quiet’: šüme kuza <шемя куса> ‘quiet person’; 52ob.407 скор ‘hurry’: manzəra-žik kuza <мансыражик кузя> ‘hurry-PTCP person’; nominalizer function with participles and adjectives;
- 8) present tense in -GU (instead of -GA) as attested also by Castrén, e.g. in 54ob.482 nönə-le? i-gü-m <ненилейкум> ‘I am hearing (hear-CV be-PRS-1SG)’;

- 9) no assimilation of present/future tense l- with n-stems (yet), e.g. 53ob.444 uja am-la <уюмло> ‘meat eat-FUT.3SG’ (vs. Donner: am-nə), 53ob.451 pim-le <пимлё> ‘fear-FUT.3SG’ (Donner: pim-nə);
- 10) o-dialect (vs. u), e.g. 43ob sorno ‘rain’, 45 kölij ‘raven’, 46ob oltərok ‘valley’, 47 köbriük ‘bridge’, 51.336 balto(?) ‘axe’, 51.342 moltək ‘gun’, 52.391 kök ‘green’; cf. also Russian spelling, e.g. 47ob ‘черемоха’; but 49.265 matur kuza ‘warrior (lit. hero person)’;
- 11) n-dialect (n ~ 1 alternation), e.g. 45.98 nejü=bə <неюба> ‘swan=COORD/QUEST’; 47ob.206 nem <нем> ‘bird cherry [черемоха]’; 53ob.453 anba ‘sleep’ in anba-nə šo-la? i-ge <анбан шолой|га> ‘sleep-LAT come-CV be-PRS.3SG (is coming into sleep)’ (KW 4b alma);
- 12) Koibalism š > s in some words, e.g. 54ob.475 bazə-sti-m <бозыстым> ‘I shall wash’ (Donner: bazə-šti-m).

4. Edition

- currently completing of lemma identification, clarification of readings; general phonological issues;
- vocabulary edition (1) in print: journal, faksimile + word list + comments; (2) larger data base (e.g. INEL);
- Suggestions welcome!
